Online evaluation 2020-21

During the COVID-19 pandemic, the College adapted to the new normal by transitioning to online classes using Google Meet as the online platform for classes. The college effectively managed this transition by observing the following methods:

1. Platform Selection: Google Meet was chosen for its user-friendly interface, reliability, and integration with other Google services like Google Classroom and Google Drive.
2. Faculty Training: The college organized training sessions for faculty members to familiarize them with the features of Google Meet. This included scheduling meetings, sharing screens, recording sessions, and managing participants.
3. Class Schedules: Online class schedules were developed to mirror the regular timetable as closely as possible, ensuring continuity in the learning process. The schedules were shared with students via email and college portals.
4. Communication: Regular updates and instructions on how to join classes, use Google Meet, and troubleshoot common issues were communicated to students through emails, WhatsApp groups, and the college website.
5. Interactive Sessions: To maintain engagement, teachers used Google Meet's interactive features like Q&A, polls, and breakout rooms for group discussions and activities.
6. Resource Sharing: Teachers utilized Google Drive and Google Classroom to share study materials, assignments, and recorded lectures, making resources easily accessible to students at any time.
7. Assessment and Feedback: Online assessments and quizzes were conducted using Google Forms and other integrated tools, allowing for timely feedback and evaluation of students' progress.
8. Support System: The college set up a support system to assist students and faculty with technical issues and to ensure everyone could participate in the online learning environment effectively.

By leveraging Google Meet, Maharani Kasiswari College ensured that education continued uninterrupted during the pandemic, maintaining academic standards and supporting students through challenging times.

The supporting documents stating the procedures and measures taken by the college to ensure quality education for the students are as follows:

blood. The vampire is an embodiment of otherness, and, in Stoker's tale, Dracula becomes the site of Gothic horror, where late-Victorian cultural anxieties are manifested. The degenerate otherness of the Count also reveals a fear of decline and its link to imperial anxieties.

Regression and the fear of imperial decline is seen in H.G Well's 1895 text The Time Machine. The novel is narrated by the unnamed Time Traveller, who ends up in the year 802,701. The text expresses a fear over the future and an anxiety over the identity and purpose of human beings. The race of humans the Time Traveller encounters, the Eloi, have degenerated. They have lost the intelligence and scientific endeavour held by the Time Traveller and the human race in general; in the year the Time Traveller finds them, the Eloi are merely a food source for the sinister Morlocks, pale, blind cannibals who have evolved to adapt to their underground environment.
