

REPORT

The Department of English participated in an inter-departmental visit to Rammohun Roy Memorial Museum on 23/07/2024. The students of the departments of Sociology, History, Bengali, Philosophy and English were escorted by teachers to look around the residential premise of Roy that housed the museum on a street named after him. A museum guide was assigned to students by the museum authority to explain the history of individual exhibits. The models at museum generated interest among students about ways of curating the past. They were introduced to the copies of books actually read by Roy and the clothes which were used by him. The museum gallery presented a graphic history of the period with details of other major figures who entered into debates on scriptures, female education and the practice of Sati. The students received orientation in the early stages of feminism in colonial India. They were given refreshments after the visit was over.
